UX research · Unicity mobile checkout

Why we redesigned the desktop checkout for mobile, what we learned from reviewing it, and how we will test the new 25-screen flow. Review findings come from the current checkout; anything about customers is a hypothesis until we run the studies below.

PRODUCT
Bios Life S · ฿4,337.50

Problem

The current checkout was built for desktop: one long page, account creation mixed into the order form, and the order summary in a side column. On a phone that summary falls below the fold, the form feels long, and there is no sense of how many steps are left.

How might we help a mobile shopper pay for Bios Life S quickly, with the price clear at every step, and know where the order is afterwards?

Research goals

1. Find where people hesitate or drop off when checking out on a phone.
2. Learn which payment methods buyers in Thailand expect to see, and why.
3. Understand what buyers need to see after paying to feel confident.
4. Check that the new 25-screen flow is faster and clearer than the desktop page.

Research questions

- Do new buyers expect to create an account, or would they rather check out first and set a password later?
- Is the referral code something buyers look for, or does it distract people who don't have one?
- When do buyers choose card, QR code or bank transfer, and what makes them trust each?
- What causes a payment to fail or be abandoned, and what helps people recover?
- After paying, which updates matter most: confirmation, receipt, tracking or delivery?

Methods

Done
Heuristic review
Walked through the current desktop checkout against usability heuristics and mobile form guidelines. Source of the findings below.

Planned
Competitive review
Compare mobile checkouts of e-commerce and wellness brands popular in Thailand: steps, payment options, tracking.

Planned
Customer interviews
6–8 remote interviews with new buyers, repeat buyers and members, to test the personas and journey map.

Planned
Usability test
5–6 moderated sessions on a phone with the clickable prototype, using the tasks listed below.

Planned
Checkout analytics
Funnel from cart to paid order, split by device and payment method, as the baseline to measure the redesign against.

Key findings → design response

From the heuristic review of the desktop checkout

F1 · High
Signing up is mixed into placing the order
Name, contact details and a new password sit in one form, so buying feels like registering.
Response: 04 Contact keeps the fields short, with a Log in link to 05 for returning buyers.

F2 · High
The total is easy to lose on a phone
The order summary lives in a side column, which drops below the form on a small screen.
Response: a collapsible summary on 04 Contact, and the amount on the main button ("Pay ฿4,337.50").

F3 · Medium
No sense of progress
One long page gives no cue for how much is left, which makes the form feel longer than it is.
Response: three steps (Contact, Shipping, Payment) with a stepper you can tap back through.

F4 · Medium
The referral field competes for attention
It is shown to everyone, which can make buyers without a code wonder if they are missing a discount.
Response: the referral code sits behind a toggle on 04 Contact.

F5 · Medium
No clear path when payment fails
The flow covers the happy path only; there is no defined state for a declined card or an expired QR.
Response: 15 Processing and 16 Payment failed, with "try again" and "use another method".

F6 · Low
The journey stops at "order placed"
Buyers get no in-app view of receipt, shipping or delivery, so questions go to support or the distributor.
Response: 17–25 add confirmation, order details, receipt, tracking, delivery, reviews and a report-a-problem flow.

Hypotheses to validate

- H1 · Splitting checkout into 3 steps will raise completion on mobile. Measure: cart-to-paid rate on phones.
- H2 · Offering QR code and bank transfer next to card will reduce abandonment at payment. Measure: drop-off on 09 Payment by method.
- H3 · In-app tracking will cut "where is my order?" contacts. Measure: support contacts per order.
- H4 · A clear failure screen will bring more failed payments back to a paid order. Measure: recovery rate after 16 Payment failed.

Usability test tasks

1. Buy one box of Bios Life S as a new customer and pay by card.
2. You already have an account: log in and finish the order.
3. Pay with a QR code from your banking app.
4. Your card was declined. Get the order paid.
5. Find out when your order will arrive and where it is now.
6. Your box arrived damaged. Tell us about it.

Success metrics

|---|---|
| Checkout completion | Cart → paid order, on mobile |
| Time to pay | From 02 Cart to 17 Order confirmed |
| Task success · SUS | From the usability sessions |
| Support contacts per order | "Where is my order?" and payment issues |

Targets to be set once the analytics baseline is in.

Findings F1–F6 come from a review of the existing checkout, not from customer sessions. Customer needs, hypotheses and personas are assumptions to confirm with the planned interviews, usability tests and analytics.

PROTO-PERSONAS

Personas · who checks out with Unicity

Three fictional buyers that sum up the needs we designed for. They are assumption-based and will be updated after the customer interviews. Nok is the primary persona used in the customer journey map.

Primary · Nok    Secondary · Somchai, Ploy

Nok · Primary

34 · Office worker · Bangkok
First-time buyer · referred by a friend

> "I just want to buy it on my phone during lunch. Don't make me create an account first."

ABOUT
Busy, health-curious, buys almost everything on her phone. A friend who is a Unicity member recommended Bios Life S and sent her a link with a referral code.

|---|---|
| Pay in a few minutes | Long forms on small screens |
| Know the full price, shipping included | Forced sign-up before paying |
| Use her friend's referral code | Hidden fees at the last step |

SCREENS THAT MATTER MOST
02 Cart · 04 Contact · 09 Payment · 11 QR code · 17 Order confirmed

Somchai · Secondary

52 · Shop owner · Chiang Mai
Repeat buyer · reorders every month

> "Same box as last month. Just let me reorder and tell me when it arrives."

ABOUT
Takes Bios Life S as part of a daily routine his doctor encouraged. Comfortable with apps he already knows, less patient with new ones. Prefers larger text and clear buttons.

| GOALS | FRUSTRATIONS |
|---|---|
| Reorder fast with saved details | Retyping his address every time |
| Pay with his saved card | Small text and tiny tap targets |
| Track delivery without calling anyone | Not knowing where the parcel is |

Ploy · Secondary

29 · Unicity member · Khon Kaen
Orders for herself and shares with customers

> "My customers ask me where their order is. I need a receipt and a tracking number I can send them."

ABOUT
Sells part-time and runs everything from LINE and her phone. Orders often, sometimes on behalf of others, and needs paperwork that looks professional.

| GOALS | FRUSTRATIONS |
|---|---|
| Make sure her referral is credited | No downloadable receipt |
| Get a receipt with tax details | Bank transfers that aren't matched to the order |
| Share tracking with customers | Handling damaged-item claims by chat |

Design principles

What the three personas have in common

Price is never a surprise
The total, VAT and shipping are visible before the pay button, and the amount is on the button itself.

Pay the way you already pay
Card, QR code and bank transfer get equal weight, each with its own clear next screen.

The order doesn't end at payment
Receipt, tracking, delivery and help stay one tap away, so no one needs to call support or the distributor.

Names, details and quotes are illustrative, not real customers. Replace them with patterns from the planned interviews before using these personas for prioritisation.

Customer journey map

| STAGE | 1 ContactCreate account or log in | 2 ShippingAddress and delivery method | 3 PaymentCard, QR code or bank | 4 Order confirmedPayment received, packing | 5 On the wayWith the courier | 6 DeliveredReceived, rate, reorder |
| GOAL | Get to checkout fast, without unnecessary sign-up steps. | Get it to the right place, at a cost and time I know upfront. | Pay safely with a method I already trust. | Be sure the order went through and know what happens next. | Know where the parcel is and when it will arrive. | Receive the product in good condition and reorder easily. |
| DOING | Logs in, or creates an accountEnters name, email, mobile and passwordAccepts T&C; may add a referral code | Enters address, sub-district, district, province and postal codeChooses home delivery or pickup | Picks card, QR code or bank transferTypes card details, or switches to a bank appTaps Pay now | Reads the confirmation and total paidNotes the order numberOpens the emailed receipt | Checks the delivery statusCopies the tracking numberFollows the parcel on the courier's site | Receives the parcelRates the orderBuys again, or reports a problem |
| THINKING | "Do I really need an account just to buy this?" | "How much is shipping, and when will it get here?" | "Is my card safe here? Did the payment actually go through?" | "Good, it worked. Now when does it ship?" | "Is it still on time? Do I need to be home?" | "It's here. I'll reorder when this runs out." |
| FEELINGAbove the dashed line: positiveBelow it: negative | Slightly annoyedSign-up feels like a detour | UnsureFee and timing not known yet | AnxiousLowest point: trust and effort | RelievedThe order went through | WaitingWants updates without asking | SatisfiedProduct in hand |
| TOUCHPOINTS | Contact screenOrder summaryLog in | Shipping screenDelivery options | Payment screenBanking appCard issuer check | Confirmation screenEmail receipt | Tracking screenCourier websiteCourier driver | ParcelDelivered screenRatingSupport |
| PAIN POINTS | Account creation is required before buyingLong legal text on a small screenPassword rules not shown upfront | Shipping fee only appears at this stepFive address fields to type on mobile | Doubts about card safetyTyping a 16-digit card numberLeaving the app to pay by QR | Not clear when it will shipReceipt is hard to find again later | Has to switch to the courier's siteHas to check back to see if anything changed | Reordering means repeating checkoutNo obvious way to report damage |
| OPPORTUNITIES | In the design: collapsible order summary keeps the price in view; referral code tucked away as optionalNext: guest checkout, show password rules inline | In the design: each delivery option has a slot for fee and timingNext: fill district from postal code, save addresses | In the design: Secure badge, encryption note, total shown above Pay now, save cardNext: processing and payment-failed screens | In the design: status tracker sets expectations; Track order is the one next stepNext: receipt kept in order history | In the design: one-tap copy of the tracking numberNext: notify at each status change, show tracking inside the app | In the design: rating, Buy again and Report a problemNext: reorder with saved details, reminder before it runs out |

Feelings, thoughts and pain points are assumptions drawn from the designed screens, not research findings. Validate them with customer interviews and checkout analytics before prioritising.

Wireframe User Flow — Unicity Payment

25 low-fidelity wireframes in click order, numbered and laid out like the UI screens on this canvas (5 per row). Arrows are direct taps from one screen to the next; where a screen is reached another way, the note under it says from where. The full branching is on the User flow board.
